ADVENT: ON WAITING AND EXPECTATIONS

Ray and I were out to lunch the other day with a friend and we got into a discussion about people expecting others to change. The bottom line was our friend told his frustrated daughter that it did not work; and she dropped her boyfriend that she had been trying to change for years and she realized she just needed to move on. She is happier now.

So I have been reflecting on waiting and expectations ever since. When we wait on God, we wait on God's will for us and others. When we expect God to follow our orders or wishes, we get into trouble because we can be disappointed and closed off to new possibilities, relationships, and experiences. God opens new avenues for us to follow but we must be alert to watch for them. When we expect others to change, we also get into trouble. Who among us wants to be changed or molded by another's expectations – someone who thinks they have the right answers for our problems or a design on how we should be or our lives should be. Sometimes by putting the shoe on the other foot so to speak we can realize how out of line our own thinking is. Control in relationships never goes very well.

I have heard it said that when our expectations are high our serenity is low and when our expectations are low, our serenity is high. Makes sense doesn't it?

As we embrace this wonderful season of Advent, we sit with Mary as she awaits the coming of her baby – Jesus. Her life was turned upside down; her expectations were changed into a vision of what God wanted for her which was probably beyond her wildest expectations! Mary is a model for us of being open to God's will for us and how we are called to watch for signs of new life and vitality which God offers us. We all go through our 'dark nights' but God is with us and continues to open doors and windows for us. They just may not be what we were expecting! Happy Advent and Merry Christmas
